

ABOUT THE CONTRIBUTORS

Michel S. Beaulieu is Assistant Professor of Northern Ontario History, Co-Director of the Centre for Northern Studies, and Co-Director of the Lakehead Social History Institute at Lakehead University. His current work explores issues relating to ethnicity, socialism and labour in northern Canada. His publications include the edited collections Essays in Northwestern Ontario Working Class History: Thunder Bay and Its Environs (2008), Final Fantasy and Philosophy (2009), and The Lady Lumberjack: An Annotated Collection of Dorothea Mitchell's Writings (2005). A co-authored short history of Northwestern Ontario will be published by James Lorimer and Company in Spring 2010.

Geoff Read is an assistant professor of history at Huron University College in London Ontario, and a proud former editor of Left History. He has published articles on masculinity and the right in interwar France, and is revising a book manuscript on gender and the political parties in France, 1918-1940. He is also co-editing a volume on Canadian aboriginal history for Oxford University Press.

Patrick Webber grew up in rural New Brunswick, earned his B.A. at St. Thomas University and his M.A. at the University of New Brunswick. He is currently applying to resume his Doctorate in the fall of 2010.

Harvey Amani Whitfield is an Associate Professor of History at the University of Vermont. He has published several articles and a book about the black experience in Nova Scotia during the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries. He is currently working on a book about slavery in Maritime Canada.