ABOUT THE CONTRIBUTORS

Kent Worcester teaches political theory at Marymount Manhattan College. His books include C.L.R. James: A Political Biography (1996), Violence and Politics: Globalization's Paradox (2002), and Silent Agitators: Cartoon Art from the Pages of New Politics (2016).

N. Harry Rothschild is a Professor of Asian History at the University of North Florida. The focus of Rothschild's ongoing research is Wu Zhao (624–705), better known as Wu Zetian or Empress Wu. His most recent book is Emperor Wu Zhao and her Pantheon of Devis, Divinities, and Dynastic Mothers (Columbia University Press, 2015), which examines the female emperor's sustained effort to establish cultural, religious, and political legitimacy. In addition, he has published an array of essays analyzing various facets of Wu Zhao's sovereignty in Italian, Korean, Chinese, and American journals.

Tal Elmaliach is a Kreitman Post-Doctoral Fellow at the Ben-Gurion Institute for the Study of Israel and Zionism. From 2015 to 2017, he was an Israel Institute Post-Doctoral Fellow at the Mosse-Weinstein Center for Jewish Studies, University of Wisconsin-Madison. He wrote his doctoral thesis, which deals with the kibbutz movement of Hashomer Hatzair and the Mapam political party during the years 1956–1977, at Haifa University. He has so far published a book and number of articles on this subject (both in Hebrew and English). Presently, he researches the political thought of David Ben-Gurion in the lab of Avi Bareli at the Ben-Gurion Institute.

Steve Fuller is Auguste Comte Professor of Social Epistemology in the Department of Sociology at the University of Warwick, UK. His most recent books include a trilogy on "Humanity 2.0" (Palgrave Macmillan 2011–2014), Knowledge: The Philosophical Quest in History (Routledge 2015), The Academic Caesar (Sage 2016), and Post-Truth: Knowledge as a Power Game (Anthem 2018).

Natalie Spagnuolo, a PhD candidate in Critical Disability Studies at York University, is a completing a dissertation that examines political economies of medical decision-making at local, national, and transnational levels. Natalie is active in the disability movement through various grassroots organizations and through the Council of Canadians with Disabilities—a leading national organization working to improve laws and policies that impact disabled people living in Canada. She recently co-founded Memory, Witness and Hope/Mémoire, témoignages et espoir, a participatory, multi-modal project where English and French-speaking survivors of institutions for people with intellectual disabilities access supports to tell their stories with peers and the community at large.