

ABOUT THE CONTRIBUTORS

Bryan D. Palmer, for many years editor of Labour/Le Travail, is the author or editor of over 20 books on labour and the left. He often writes for Canadian Dimension and is currently a member of the editorial collective of the Socialist Register. His last major monograph, co-authored with Gaétan Héroux, is Toronto's Poor: A Rebelious History, published by Between the Lines in 2016. A forthcoming volume, James P. Cannon and the Emergence of Trotskyism in the United States, 1928–1938, will appear in the Historical Materialism Book Series, published by Brill, in 2019.

Juan Carlos Mezo González is a PhD Candidate in History working on a collaborative program in Sexual Diversity Studies at the University of Toronto. His research traces the transnational networks that people working with gay periodicals established across North America from the early 1970s to the mid-1990s, as well as the relationship between visual culture and the making of transnational gay communities throughout that period. Juan Carlos is a recipient of the Mexican National Council of Science and Technology (CONACYT) Doctoral Scholarship and an Ontario Graduate Scholarship.

Rachel B. Zellars is a lawyer and assistant professor in the Department of Social Justice and Community Studies at Saint Mary's University. Prior, she served as a Postdoctoral Fellow at the University of Vermont in the Department of History, where her research focused on the history of Black migration and slavery in the Maritimes beginning in the eighteenth century. Dr. Zellars's research focuses, broadly, on the histories of anti-black schooling segregation in Canada; migration and slavery in the Maritimes and throughout the Atlantic world from the eighteenth century; and the historical impact of gender violence in the lives of Black women.

Brian S. Mueller is an independent historian. He is currently completing his first book, Democracy's Think Tank: The Institute for Policy Studies and the Fight Against Cold War Liberalism, which will be published by the University of Pennsylvania Press. His peer-reviewed work has appeared in Peace & Change, Diplomatic History, and Journal for the Study of Radicalism.