

Contributors

Chris Burr has a sessional appointment in the department of history at the University of Ottawa, making a living in a province where the Conservative's "Common Sense Revolution" makes no sense at all. She is currently researching divorce reform in nineteenth and twentieth-century Ontario. Her work has appeared in the Canadian Historical Review, Labour/Le Travail, Ontario History, and the Dictionary of Canadian Biography.

Paul Le Blanc teaches at Slippery Rock University. He is the author of Lenin and the Revolutionary Party, (Humanities Press 1990).

Born in a working-class district on the south side of Chicago, William A. Pelz had hoped to pursue a career as a bus driver but later lowered his expectations and became an academic historian. A specialist in European and comparative labour history, Pelz is the editor of the Encyclopedia of the European Left. Currently an untenured university teacher, he aspires to one day have a unionized job and earn as much as his machinist father did thirty years ago.

Christopher Phelps teaches history at Simon Fraser University in Vancouver. He wrote the introduction to the new edition of Sidney Hook's From Hegel to Marx (Columbia University Press, 1994) and is an editor of Against the Current.

Vijay Prashad teaches in the departments of history at Cornell University and Syracuse University. He earned his PhD at the University of Chicago in 1994. Prashad is currently working on a project that responds to the idea of Western Marxism: he is making theory out of the praxis of 'Eastern Communism.' Prashad is a member of the Young Communist League.

Joan Sangster teaches History and Women's Studies at Trent University, Peterborough, Canada. She is the author of Dreams of Equality: Women on the Canadian Left, 1920-1950 (McClelland and Stewart 1989) and of articles on working-class and women's history. Her recent book, Earning Respect: The Lives of Working Women in Small Town Ontario, 1920-1960 was published by University of Toronto Press this year.