

Contributors

David S. Churchill is an assistant professor of United States history at the University of Manitoba. His research interests include new social movements and radical culture in the 1960s, queer history, and the politics of sexual liberation during the Cold War.

Peter Cole is an assistant professor of history at Western Illinois University. His article on the Philadelphia Controversy is part of a book project examining the history of the IWW's Local 8, the most successful effort at interracial unionism in the U.S. Progressive Era.

Jo Freeman is a feminist scholar and activist. She has published nine books (and written a tenth), as well as numerous articles for scholarly and popular journals. She has a Ph.D. in Political Science from the University of Chicago (1973) and a J.D. from New York University School of Law (1982). As can be seen from her article, she was active in several social movements. For more information, go to www.JoFreeman.com

Aspasia Kotsopoulos is a doctoral candidate in Communications at Simon Fraser University. She is finishing her dissertation on co-production and television adaptation entitled, "Romance and Industry on the Road to Avonlea." She has taught film and cultural studies at the University of Victoria for the past four years.

Daniel Rosenberg teaches history and is Director of General Studies in the College of Arts & Sciences, Adelphi University. He is a labour and social historian, the author of several books, and has published in Labor History, The Reference Librarian, Science & Society, and the Long Island Historical Review, among others.